Routledge Revivals: The Design Professions and the Built Environment (1988) Paul L. Knox, 2016-10-04 First published in 1988 this book argues that discussions of urban development often neglect to consider that much of the urban environment is designed by architects and planners and that the particular world view of architects and planners is crucial for the way proposals are taken up modified and carried out The author explores the world view of architects and planners considering their approach to design and the factors which influence this work patterns career paths and the firms in which they operate The author also studies their place in the political decision making process as it affects urban questions and then explores how architects and planners roles are changing Professionalism for the Built Environment Simon Foxell, 2018-09-03 In the aftermath of the Grenfell Tower tragedy this new book provides thought provoking commentary on the nature of the relationship between society the prevailing economic system and professionalism in the built environment It addresses the changing responsibilities of professionals and in particular their obligation to act in the wider public interest It is both an introduction to and an examination of professionalism and professional bodies in the sector including a view of the future of professionalism and the organisations serving it Simon Foxell outlines the history of professionalism in the sector comparing and contrasting the development of the three major historic professions working in the construction industry civil engineering architecture and surveying He examines how their systems have developed over time up to the current period dominated by large professional services firms and looks at some options for the future whilst asking difficult questions about ethics training education public trust and expectation from within and outside the industry The book concludes with a six point plan to help if not ensure that the professions remain an effective and essential part of both society and the economy a part that allows the system to operate smoothly and easily but also fairly and to the benefit of all Essential reading for built environment professionals and students doing the professional studies elements of their training or in the process of applying for chartership or registration The issues and lessons are applicable across all building professions The Built

Environment Wendy R. McClure, Tom J. Bartuska, 2011-09-09 This book takes a sweeping view of the ways we build things beginning at the scale of products and interiors to that of regions and global systems In doing so it answers questions on how we effect and are affected by our environment and explores how components of what we make from products buildings and cities are interrelated and why designers and planners must consider these connections Architectural Knowledge Francis Duffy, Les Hutton, 2004-01-14 This important book looks at the relationship between the architectural profession and the built environment in the context of the great political and social cycles in the British post war period Environmental Design

Knox, 2020-10 The design professions architecture city planning landscape architecture and urban design share a great deal in terms of intellectual antecedents professional ideals and praxis In particular they share a commitment to creating better cities whether at the scale of buildings neighborhoods or city regions But who decides what constitutes a good city and how should such an ideal be implemented In Better by Design Paul Knox explores the intellectual roots of the design professions showing how architects planners and other designers have traditionally interpreted their roles and implemented their ideas in cities across North America and the UK Drawing on his long record of research and award winning publications on the social production of the built environment Knox offers a critical appraisal of their ultimate effectiveness in achieving the goal of creating and sustaining good cities

Energy and the Built Environment: a Gap in Current Strategies Leo A. Daly, 1974 Ideas and Beliefs in Architecture and Industrial Design Ivar Holm, 2006

Architecture--art Or Profession? Mark Crinson, Jules Lubbock, 1994 Architects are perhaps the most important people involved in shaping the built environment so the ideas they receive in the course of their training are a major influence upon the buildings and cities of the future Crinson and Lubbock present a bold new perspective on the evolution of the British architect from Wren to post modernism and beyond and provide the first general history of architectural education making an important contribution to current debates The Prince of Wales views on modern architecture and the need for a change in the way architects are trained has attracted enormous support from the public resulting in architects and their training being under the spotlight more than ever The drive to define and promote the architectural profession that began in the eighteenth century and reached its apogee in the 1960s has now begun to unravel How has this happened What relation does an architect's education have to the built environment What lessons are there from the past This book will be of interest to students lecturers and all those interested in the debates around contemporary architecture
