The Great Caliphs Amira K. Bennison,2011-07-30 The flowering of the Abbasid caliphate between 750 and 1258 CE is often considered the classical age of Islamic civilization In the preceding 120 years the Arabs had conquered much of the known world of antiquity and established a vast empire stretching from Spain to China But was this empire really so very different as has sometimes been claimed from what it superseded The Great Caliphs creatively explores the immense achievements of the Abbasid age through the lens of Mediterranean history When the Umayyad caliphs were replaced by the Abbasids in 750 and the Arab capital moved to Baghdad Iraq quickly became the centre not only of an imperium but also of a culture built on the foundations of the great civilizations of antiquity Greece Rome Byzantium and Persia Debunking popular misconceptions about the Arab conquests Amira Bennison shows that far from seeing themselves as purging the occidental culture of the ancient world with a pure and oriental Islamic doctrine the Abbasids perceived themselves to be as much within the tradition of Mediterranean and Near Eastern empire as any of their predecessors Like other outsiders who inherited the Roman Empire the Arabs had as much interest in preserving as in destroying even while they were challenged by the paganism of the past Indebted to that past while building creatively on its foundations the Abbasids and their rulers inculcated and nurtured precisely the civilized values which western civilization so often claims to represent

E. Al-Djazairi, 2018-01-05 In the generalised view today a view fed alike by propagandist literature scholarship the media and most if not all other agencies Islam equates barbarism If there is one view in the world that is utterly fundamentally wrong it is that just stated If there is one force of progress and real civilisation it is Islam That Muslims and Muslim society today are in a dire state this is certain This work acknowledges this However relying on historical facts not claims and tackling argument by argument this book this volume in particular shows that it was Islam which was not just at the foundation of Muslim greatness during the medieval period but also that the whole world including the West owes it all to Islam Without the impact of Islam there would have never been an Islamic civilisation Without Islamic civilisation there would have never been Western modern civilisation The "Golden Age" of Islam Mohd.
