The Golden Threshold:

The Golden Threshold Sarojini Naidu,2020-09-28 It is at my persuasion that these poems are now published The earliest of them were read to me in London in 1896 when the writer was seventeen the later ones were sent to me from India in 1904 when she was twenty five and they belong I think almost wholly to those two periods As they seemed to me to have an individual beauty of their own I thought they ought to be published The writer hesitated Your letter made me very proud and very sad she wrote Is it possible that I have written verses that are filled with beauty and is it possible that you really think them worthy of being given to the world You know how high my ideal of Art is and to me my poor casual little poems seem to be less than beautiful I mean with that final enduring beauty that I desire And in another letter she writes I am not a poet really I have the vision and the desire but not the voice If I could write just one poem full of beauty and the spirit of greatness I should be exultantly silent for ever but I sing just as the birds do and my songs are as ephemeral It is for this bird like quality of song it seems to me that they are to be valued They hint in a sort of delicately evasive way at a rare temperament the temperament of a woman of the East finding expression through a Western language and under partly Western influences They do not express the whole of that temperament but they express I think its essence and there is an Eastern magic in them Sarojini Chattopadhyay was born at Hyderabad on February 13 1879 Her father Dr Aghorenath Chattopadhyay is descended from the ancient family of Chattorajes of Bhramangram who were noted throughout Eastern Bengal as patrons of Sanskrit learning and for their practice of Yoga He took his degree of Doctor of Science at the University of Edinburgh in 1877 and afterwards studied brilliantly at Bonn On his return to India he founded the Nizam College at Hyderabad and has since laboured incessantly and at great personal sacrifice in the cause of education
