The Avenue Goes To War:

The Avenue Goes to War R. F. Delderfield, 2011-11-24 Life didn't stop in the Avenue because the war had started. Bernie Carver joins up with the Commandos with his twin brother, hoping they will serve out the war together. Archie Carver is determined to end the war richer than when it started. Elaine Fraser seizes her opportunity to live a little now her husband is out of the way. War has broken out and the blitz will soon change everything in the Avenue. Many men have gone off to fight, but others stay behind with less honourable intentions.

The Avenue Goes to War R. F. Delderfield, 1975-03-01 194X Andrew Michael Shanken, 2009 During the Second World War, American architecture was in a state of crisis. The rationing of building materials and restrictions on nonmilitary construction continued the privations that the profession had endured during the Great Depression. At the same time, the dramatic events of the 1930s and 1940s led many architects to believe that their profession and society itself would undergo a profound shift once the war ended, with private commissions giving way to centrally planned projects. The magazine Architectural Forum coined the term 194X to encapsulate this wartime vision of postwar architecture and urbanism. In a major study of American architecture during World War II, Andrew M. Shanken focuses on the culture of anticipation that arose in this period as out-of-work architects turned their energies from the built to the unbuilt, redefining themselves as planners and creating original designs to excite the public about postwar architecture. Shanken recasts the wartime era as a crucible for the intermingling of modernist architecture and consumer culture. Challenging the pervasive idea that corporate capitalism corrupted the idealism of modernist architecture in the postwar era, 194X shows instead that architecture's wartime partnership with corporate America was founded on shared anxieties and ideals. Business and architecture were brought together in innovative ways, as shown by Shanken's persuasive reading of magazine advertisements for Revere Copper and Brass, U.S. Gypsum, General Electric, and other companies that prominently featured the work of leading progressive architects, including Louis I. Kahn, Eero Saarinen, and Walter Gropius. Although the unexpected prosperity of the postwar era made the architecture of 194X obsolete before it could be built and led to its exclusion from the story of twentieth-century American architecture, Shanken makes clear that its anticipatory rhetoric and designs played a crucial role in the widespread acceptance.

Communicating Environmental Patriotism Anne Marie Todd, 2013-06-07 Environmental patriotism, the belief that the national environment defines a country's greatness, is a significant strand in twentieth-century American environmentalism. This book is the first to explore the history of environmental patriotism in America through the intriguing stories of environmental patriots and the rhetoric of their speeches and propaganda. The See America First movement began in 1906 with the aim of protecting and promoting the landscapes of the American West. In 1908, Gifford Pinchot and President Theodore Roosevelt hosted the White House Conservation Conference to promote the wise use of natural resources for generations of Americans. In 1912, Pittsburgh's smoke investigation condemned the effects of coal smoke on the city's environment In World War II a massive propaganda effort mobilized millions of Americans to plant victory gardens to save resources for the war abroad While these may not seem like crucial moments for the American environmental movement this new history of American environmentalism shows that they are linked by patriotism The book offers a provoking critique of environmentalists communication strategies and suggests patriotism as a persuasive hook for new ways to make environmental issues a national priority This original research should be of interest to scholars of environmental communication environmental history American history and environmental philosophy

A Word from Our Sponsor Cynthia B. Meyers, 2013-12-01 During the golden age of radio from roughly the late 1920s until the late 1940s advertising agencies were arguably the most important sources of radio entertainment Most nationally broadcast programs on network radio were created produced written and or managed by advertising agencies for example J Walter Thompson produced Kraft Music Hall for Kraft Benton and Young agency records of BBDO Benton contemporaneous trade publications and the voluminous correspondence between NBC and agency executives in the NBC Records at the Wisconsin Historical Society Mediating between audiences desire for entertainment and advertisers desire for sales admen combined showmanship with salesmanship to produce a uniquely American form of commercial culture In recounting the history of this form Meyers enriches and corrects our understanding not only of broadcasting history but also of advertising history business history and American cultural history from the 1920s to the 1940s
