Steelwork offers the opportunity for architectural expression as well as being structurally versatile and adaptable material Good detailing is vital because it affects structural performance costs buildability and perhaps most importantly appearance Whilst the choice of the structural form is often the province of the structural engineer architects should have a broad appreciation of the factors leading to the selection of the structure and its details Traditionally most detailing of connections is the responsibility of the steelwork fabricator but for exposed steelwork detailing is of much more interest to the architect as it impacts on the aesthetics of the structure In this respect it is important that designers appreciate the common fabrication and erection techniques which may exert a strong influence on the method and approach to the detailing of modern steelwork in buildings Architectural Design in Steel is a design guide to the detailing of exposed steelwork in buildings It is a guide which offers technical guidance and general principles as well as examples of best practice It covers all aspects from manufacture to detailing specification of finishes and fabrication providing architects as well as engineers with essential information to inform the design Specification for Structural Steel Sections British Standards Institution,1969 Specification for Hot Rolled Non-alloy Structural Steel Sections and H-piles (first Revision) ,2001 Specification for Hot Rolled Non-alloy Structural Steel Sections and H-piles (first Revision) Malaysia.
