Students demonstrate an understanding of engineering problem-solving techniques simply from the knowledge already provided by learning the principles of thermodynamics. The key to understanding the introduction of design is to present the primary responsibility associated with design. The typical engineering culture does not require every team member who joins the problem to have the same level of skill, knowledge, or training. Therefore, design is a collaborative effort between the student designer or other group design, and it is essential that a strong leader be chosen to be responsible to the other group members. Design is a collaborative process of understanding the problem, identifying the requirements, and developing a solution to the design problem.
