

A detailed historical painting of a bustling harbor scene. In the foreground, a group of people in 17th-century attire are gathered. A man in a dark coat and hat points towards the ships, while a woman in a red dress and white headscarf looks on. To the right, a large cannon is mounted on a wooden carriage. The background is filled with numerous sailing ships of various sizes, their masts and sails visible against a hazy sky. The overall atmosphere is one of activity and settlement.

through a study of the gallery's administration collection and exhibition practices over the last 150 years. What is understood by and expected of a national gallery varies considerably worldwide. Should it regard itself as part of a broad international cultural discourse or should it be representative of a specifically national or even regional identity? The gallery is a microcosm of the greater debate how the South African nation relates to the larger world and how if at all it understands the concept of a shared culture. In the last 20 years Museum Studies have become a major part of the field of Cultural Studies. There is a vast literature on what might be called the history museum but far less on the art museum or gallery. To date there has been no large scale historical inquiry into the Iziko SANG the country's national gallery. The absence of such a history marks a serious gap in the literature which this study aims to fill.
