

NATURE VS NURTURE

Nature versus nurture is an ongoing debate about the degree to which human behaviour is determined by genetic inheritance (nature) or learned through interactions with the environment (nurture).

NURTURE

Explanations suggesting behaviour is determined by the environment and personal experiences. They believe all human characteristics are a result of social and material environmental factors that influence development known as life experiences.

Petrie, M. (1920) conducted a case study on a child known as 'Little Albert' to see if it was possible to condition a child to fear an innocuous object.

- Little Albert showed no fear response to any stimulus before the experiment.
- Little Albert was presented with a white rat. Each time he reached for it, a loud noise was played (unconditioned stimulus). Albert responded to the rat alone crying and rapidly 'locking' away, which was later known as the fear response.
- The fear had been transferred to other looking objects, including a rabbit and a fur coat.
- One month later, Albert continued to show fear reactions to all similar objects. This provided evidence that the environment can manipulate to create a phobic response and behavioural change.

Zimbardo (1972) conducted the Stanford Prison Experiment to investigate the effects that roles and the environment can have on people's behaviour.

- 24 male volunteers were randomly assigned to the role of 'prisoner' or 'guard'.
- A simulated prison was built in the basement of the psychology building at Stanford University.
- Guards were given authority, uniforms, batons, whistles and dominantly in the body of control and power.
- As a result, guards beat their 'prisoners', used abusive language, imposed arbitrary rules and easily adopted other behaviours.
- Their behaviour had no been accepted after just six days.

The Humanistic Approach – believes their behaviour is influenced by their personal and environmental self-world.

The Behaviourist Approach – behaviour is learned through a process of conditioning.

The Social Approach – explains their behaviour is influenced by other person's off culture.

PROBLEMS WITH THE NATURE VS NURTURE DEBATE

1. It is reductionist because it states that behaviour is solely caused by genetic factors or experience.
2. It is deterministic because it suggests behaviour is determined by hereditary factors, while environmental suggest that behaviour is the result of interactions with the environment.
3. It is difficult to control variables. For example, the variables in this study could not be known for sure if they were valid. All influences cannot be isolated.

NATURE

Naturalists argue that behaviour is caused by innate characteristics that are passed down our ancestors and form our genetic make-up. They believe genes play a role in our behaviour because we are programmed from birth, and innate behaviours are generalised to us through our family tree.

Genes and Twins (1980) involved twin and adoption studies to determine whether先天性 or genetic link.

Adoption studies found an increased occurrence of schizophrenia in adopted children with schizophrenia parents. Children of schizophrenia parents and adopted parents of schizophrenia children showed little evidence of schizophrenia. This indicates a significant genetic impact into the onset of schizophrenia.

Twin studies found a higher concordance rate for schizophrenia in identical twins than non-identical twins. On average, there is a 50% probability that both individuals in a pair will have a certain characteristic, given that one of them has that characteristic. Interestingly, there was a concordance rate of 50% in identical twins, compared to 12% in non-identical twins.

Phenome (1980) found that the overall heritability of IQ is identical and monozygous twins, which means identical twins share 50% of their genes. However, when only identical twins that have adopted were studied, the heritability rate increased to 0.74, which means they share 74% of their genes. This suggests that the environment influences behaviour, especially in the environment.

The Biological Approach – believes behaviour is controlled by the brain, which is influenced by other factors such as hormones, systems.

NATURE AND NURTURE INTERACTION

Psychologists generally agree that behaviour is a result of life experiences, nurture and inheritance.

Psychologists believe that behaviour is a result of the environment. An individual's behaviour is mainly caused by the environment because they are part of it. Every child is born with the same individual behaviour, nonetheless, they are influenced by the environment.

Margulis et al. (2000) conducted a study on mice to show how behaviour is shaped by the environment.

They found that mice from different environments had different brain structures and that behaviour was as a result of these differences.

Genes can be seen as causing the environment, because they produce behaviour.

The Psychodynamic Approach – believes behaviour is caused by unconscious and childhood experiences. Dreams and their past experiences are used to explain behaviour.

The Cognitive Approach – focuses on how behaviour is caused by cognitive processes. Individual behaviour is influenced by their thoughts and experiences.

The Developmental Approach – believes behaviour is caused by the environment. Individual behaviour is influenced by their environment.

general This is what makes it particularly interesting because there is always new information to expect Furthermore it is an issue not limited to academic discourse only but one that appears in everyday conversation An interesting aspect of language acquisition more specifically the knowledge of language is the question if children arrive at such knowledge by the mere exposure to positive evidence i e the language of adults they are surrounded with or if negative evidence also has an impact i e children s knowledge of language is based on explicit or implicit feedback to whether an utterance was in some way incorrect The two terms will be defined and looked into in more detail in the second chapter In the following the correlation between the nature vs nurture debate and language acquisition will be explained first The respective chapter provides a brief insight into how the nativist approach developed mainly based on Chomsky s 1988 notion of Universal Grammar UG and the type of criticism it brought along It further explains the connection between the respective theories and the grammatical aspect of language acquisition In the last section the main problems of experience based language learning will be displayed and defined The third chapter starts with a section dedicated to where the particular view that humans need innate structures for a correct knowledge of language stems from It continues with a detailed look on the no negative evidence problem The non existence of negative evidence and which role it plays in terms of language acquisition will be explored from different standpoints by nativists as well as non nativists Eugenical News ,1927 The Psychology of Resolving Global Conflicts: Group and social factors Mari Fitzduff,Chris E.
