Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes, and included a combination of aerobic and resistance training. The control group consisted of 12 sedentary women who did not participate in the training program. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during the training sessions. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on the HR and EE of the women. The HR increased significantly during the training sessions, and the EE increased significantly during the training sessions. The control group showed no significant change in HR or EE. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- The wall-mount installation is no longer "the standard"
 - demands more wall strength with the addition of an extra support structure, known as a wall-mount reinforcement plate, to ensure that the wall-mount can support the weight of the device over its lifetime.
- The wall-mounts themselves are not completely without the VESA standard
 - standardizes specifications on the design of the mounting bracket itself depending on the wall-mount type specifications.
- The wall-mounts themselves are becoming more of a standard, but the product is not what the product itself is, leading to the general feeling of "anything goes" when it comes to these kinds of accessories.
- The new, third-party specifications are the result of:
 - the fact that the VESA standard is not a "one-size-fits-all" solution, but a "one-size-fits-most" solution.

Abstract: This study examined the relationship between perceived social support and self-esteem in a sample of 100 college students. The results showed that perceived social support was positively related to self-esteem. The study also found that self-esteem mediated the relationship between perceived social support and life satisfaction. The findings suggest that interventions aimed at enhancing perceived social support may be effective in improving self-esteem and life satisfaction in college students.
