Reeve, 2018-10-24 Modelling forms a vital part of all engineering design yet many hydraulic engineers are not fully aware of the assumptions they make These assumptions can have important consequences when choosing the best model to inform design decisions Considering the advantages and limitations of both physical and mathematical methods this book will help you identify the most appropriate form of analysis for the hydraulic engineering application in question All models require the knowledge of their background good data and careful interpretation and so this book also provides guidance on the range of accuracy to be expected of the model simulations and how they should be related to the prototype Applications to models include open channel systems closed conduit flows storm drainage systems estuaries coastal and nearshore structures hydraulic structures This is an invaluable guide for students and professionals    Symposium on Scale Effects in Modelling Hydraulic Structures Helmut Kobus, 1985    Model-prototype Correlation of Hydraulic Structures P. Comptes Rendus International Association for Hydraulic Research. Congress,1989 Fisheries
Bioengineering Symposium John Colt,Ray Jonathan White,1991 The 1988 Fisheries Bioengineering Symposium held in Portland Oregon USA was based on a theme of Problems and Solutions in Developed River Systems The emphasis was upon developed river systems both because development is more the norm than nondevelopment and because the seemingly worst problems hence the biggest challenges for fish in rivers result from development Further one can reasonably predict that development will continue so unless adequate solutions are found river based fisheries will experience progressively greater problems Most of the symposium was devoted to solutions in two main and widely divergent topics habitat improvement and restoration and mitigation via hatcheries Although these topics may seem strange bedfellows they define the main alternatives available to fishery managers for correcting or mitigating fishery losses in developed rivers and they are the professional concerns of bioengineering In this regard it was a primary goal of the sterring committee to bring together and facilitate information exchange between biologist and engineers so that each group could gain a better appreciation for the other s perspectives constraints and strengths
