State Of Economics In Canada:

United States-Canadian Economic Relations United States. Congress. House. Committee on Foreign Affairs. Subcommittee on Foreign Economic Policy,1972 Unpublished Research on British Commonwealth, Completed and in Progress United States. Department of State. External Research Division,1961 Beginning in 1954 Apr issue lists studies in progress Oct issue completed studies The Housing and Economic Experiences of Immigrants in U.S. and Canadian Cities Carlos Teixeira,Wei Li,2015-01-01 The Housing and Economic Experiences of Immigrants in U S and Canadian Cities is a collection of essays examining how recent immigrants have fared in getting access to jobs and housing in urban centres across the continent National Library of Medicine Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.),1993

Department of State News Letter United States. Department of State,1976 Monitoring Regional Economics in Canada with New High-frequency Coincident Indexes Canada. Economic and Fiscal Policy Branch,Robert Lamy,Patrick Sabourin,2001 In contrast to many countries such as the United States it is easier to monitor actual changes in Canadian economic activity because Statistics Canada reports an estimate of the real GDP at factor cost each month But this measure of the state of economic activity including its quarterly estimate at market prices is not available for the provinces and territories The estimates of real GDP for the jurisdictions are only reported annually by the statistical agency and with a lag of several months after the end of the reference year Thus monitoring quarter to quarter changes in overall economic activity for most jurisdictions is not possible This paper introduces new quarterly composite indexes of coincident indicators of economic activity for each province and two of the three territories in order to assist in monitoring developments in regional economies The indexes are built using the methodology developed at the U S NBER Our results indicate that the composite indexes are generally more highly correlated with real GDP growth than commonly used high frequency regional economic indicators Secondly the results show that the composite indexes perform well in predicting provincial and territorial real GDP growth over the 1980s and 1990s On a quarterly basis the composite indexes for Qub ec and Ontario explain nearly 60 per cent of the variance in their respective real GDP growth On an annual basis the composite indexes for Qub ec Ontario Alberta and British Columbia four provinces representing 90 per cent of Canadian real GDP predict about 80 per cent or more of the variance of real GDP growth Thirdly the results suggest that the characteristics of the business cycle for some jurisdictions are different from the national business cycle This is attributable in part to the fact that their industrial structure differs from the national structure and the existence of local exogenous shocks In brief the composite indexes of coincident indicators will enable an improved monitoring and assessment of the strength and direction of regional economic growth in Canada Furthermore the indexes will be timely and available with a lag of only two months after the reference quarter Lastly the indexes are intended to provide only an indication of the strength and direction of regional economic activity The rate of growth of a composite index by itself is meaningless and therefore is not and should never be used as a forecast of growth in
