The Case For Transracial Adoption:

The Case for Transracial Adoption Rita James Simon, Howard Altstein, Marygold Shire Melli, 1994 This timely study analyzes the issue of adoptions that cross racial and national lines and assesses their success and appropriateness. The book's centerpiece is a comprehensive long term study of the transracial adoption conducted by Rita Simon and Howard Altstein, the result of twenty years of research and analysis. The authors discuss the case often made against transracial adoption and explain the laws that govern these adoptions.

Transracial Adoption in the United States Arnold R. Silverman, 1980

Transracial Adoption and Foster Care Joseph Crumbley, 1999 Transracial adoption and foster care has been a controversial topic throughout this decade, a topic that has led to arguments and divisions between families, neighbourhoods, professionals and policymakers. The purpose of this book is to go beyond the arguments and ask the question how do professionals help children and families make transracial adoptions and foster placements work.

Transracial Adoption, a Follow-up Rita James Simon, Howard Altstein, 1981

International and Transracial Adoptions Christopher

Bagley, Loretta Young, Anne Scully, 1993 The text begins with an overview of factors which contribute to adjustment in adoption including the role problems of adoptive parents, adoptions by step parents and neglect and abuse of children prior to adoption. Data from the British national child development study analyzed in this book indicate that adoption is a powerful environmental influence on children who without adoption would be at considerable risk for the development of major behavioural problems, delinquency and mental illness. Several chapters on inter country adoption highlight the policy dilemmas in this area and the slow progress towards comprehensive international agreements to protect the needs of inter country adopted children. Two follow up studies are reported of Chinese and Vietnamese children now young adults adopted by British parents in the 1960s and 1970s. The excellent outcomes for these children indicate that despite early trauma and neglect prior to adoption the mental health of these adoptees is as good as mental health profiles in within country adoptions.

Bullough, 2006 Multiracial Child Resource Book Maria P. P. Root, Matt Kelley, 2003 Adoption, Race, and Identity Rita J. Simon, Howard Altstein, 1992-04-30 Adoption Race and Identity examines the innovative placement of nonwhite, predominantly black adoptees with white parents. In addition to reviewing recent court decisions involving race as a factor in child custody, authors Rita Simon and Howard Altstein examine the research to date on this topic including adoption policy and practice as carried out by some adoption agencies. Although there are a few anecdotal portraits of typical situations, the work is almost exclusively devoted to actual responses to questions about the experiences of these families based on a longitudinal study that began in 1971. The authors conclude that the majority of families and their adopted children are well integrated into society and that the adoptees now as adolescents do not see themselves as any less black than their in racially raised peers. Chapters 1 and 2 examine the historical and legal background of transracial adoption. The authors discuss numbers and trends founding social movements, agency practices and the legal status of transracial adoption over the past forty years. They present the arguments by the National Association of Black Social Workers against the practice and responses offered by various adoption networks. Chapter 3 details the authors research method for the study of families and their transracial adoptees and integrates a review of the research literature. The following chapter provides demographic and social psychological data on the 200 families involved in the study and examines their stated reasons for adopting. Chapters 5 and 6 evaluate the responses to the study by parents and by adoptees and their siblings. Chapter 7 reviews the families experiences from both the parents and children's perspectives and Chapters 8 and 9 discuss problem families and ordinary families respectively. The work closes with an examination of alternative forms of child placement, a discussion of social policy and suggestions for future research and practice. This study will prove valuable to social workers, adoption agencies and scholars and practitioners in related fields.

Adoption Across Borders Rita J. Simon, Howard Altstein, 2000. For over thirty years Rita J. Simon and Howard Altstein have been studying transracial and intercountry adoptions. The families they have studied include white parents, African American, Hispanic and Korean children and Jewish Stars of David families among others. This book summarizes their findings and compares them with other studies. It is an invaluable source of data on the number and frequency of transracial and intercountry adoptions and on the attitudes toward them. Moreover, it strongly advocates and demonstrates the positive effects of transracial and intercountry adoptions, countering public policy initiatives that emphasize same race adoption practices.

Kinship by Design Ellen Herman, 2008-12. What constitutes a family? Tracing the dramatic evolution of Americans' answer to this question over the past century, Kinship by Design provides the fullest account to date of modern adoption's history. Beginning in the early 1900s when children were still transferred between households by a variety of unregulated private arrangements, Ellen Herman details efforts by the U.S. Children's Bureau and the Child Welfare League of America to establish adoption standards in law and practice. She goes on to trace Americans' shifting ideas about matching children with physically or intellectually similar parents, revealing how research in developmental science and technology shaped adoption as it navigated the nature-nurture debate. Concluding with an insightful analysis of the revolution that ushered in special needs transracial and international adoptions, Kinship by Design ultimately situates the practice as both a different way to make a family and a universal story about love, loss, identity, and belonging.
