The Internet And The Customer Supplier Relationship:

The Internet and the Customer-Supplier Relationship Stefano Ronchi, 2024-11-01 This title was first published in 2003 An exhaustive and synthetic framework for the use of Internet tools in customer supplier relationships is one aspect of e business that is still missing from existing literature This book analyses the main management implications related to the adoption of the Internet in the supply chain and unifies different research studies and contributions in order to build such a framework It is based on wide empirical evidence including four in depth case studies in both Europe and the US a cross industry survey of more than 160 US companies and website research describing emerging Internet initiatives in B2B relationships By creating a concrete link between theory and practice it should appeal to academics and practitioners alike

Effect of Internet Technologies on a Customer-supplier Relationship Nitty Hirawaty Kamarulzamana, 2008 The Effects of the Internet Adoption in Customer-Supplier Relationships Stefano Ronchi, 2014 In the last years a great attention has been paid to the potentialities related to the Internet adoption within business processes Firstly the introduction of web based technologies led to the e commerce paradigm companies started to adopt the new technologies in order to enter new markets to enhance revenues in existing ones and to supply better customer services to the final consumer Soon the e commerce became e business due to the interaction of the new technologies with all processes within the company As a matter of fact also processes going beyond the boundaries of the firm are influenced by this trend and in particular the relationships among companies within the supply chain are changing in order to face new threats and opportunities As far as the relationships across the supply chain are concerned the Internet seems supporting two apparently contrasting trends On the one hand standardization and market mechanisms are emphasized through electronic catalogs auctions and liquid exchanges On the other hand there is the opportunity to enhance the value added with higher customization and to improve supply chain performances with close relationships through new technologies which make integrable different companies information systems At a first glance it could be hypothesized that the first trend should support indirect or MRO Maintenance Repairs and Operations materials purchases while the second trend should support direct or customized materials procurement In reality the consequences of the introduction of the new technologies are rather complex and although they do not change dramatically traditional business concepts their influence on supply chain management and companies relationships is not easy to analyze The Internet changes the nature of traditional relationships and leads to new possible configurations Those changes are allowed by the technology but its introduction will not be worthwhile if it is not supported by an integrated analysis within the company and beyond it upstream and downstream in the supply chain This implies the reengineering of processes organizations and managerial configurations Performances of processes across the supply chain are strongly influenced by these interactions between new managerial and organizational configurations and new technologies There is not a deterministic one way impact of one of these two areas on the other but their development is mutually fostered and supported by each other Internet-based Enterprise Integration and Management A. Gunasekaran, Yahaya Y. Yusuf, Society of Photo-optical Instrumentation Engineers, 2001 Electronic Commerce, 2008 This collection compiles a critical mass of top research nearly 300 chapters from upwards of 400 of the world's leading experts to provide libraries with a landmark four volume reference to meet research needs in the many disciplines impacted by these far reaching topics.
