Jesus Christ the Ancestor Uchenna A. Ezeh,2003 Bern Berlin Bruxelles Frankfurt M New York Oxford Wien There is a plethora of Christological initiatives to creatively and firmly root Christianity in Africa without either Christianity compromising its prophetic vocation or the healthy cultural values of the people being destroyed From the backdrop of the African religio cultural scenario and the patrimony of the Church these Christological models seek to address the question but you who do you say that I am Mt16 15 It is a Christological question which underlines the need for a relevant theology which arises from and is accountable to the people The African cult of the ancestors epitomizes the African quest for salvation soteriology goodness in the society ethics relationship with one another community union with God spirituality and the end of the human person anthropology and eschatology These African values are perfectly fulfilled in Christ This work singles out the African ancestral Christological model with its paschal and ecclesiological dimensions to demonstrate that even though no human term can exhaust the mystery of Jesus Christ the ancestorhood of Christ as perfect and analogical model opens up a mutually enriching dialogical encounter between Christianity and the African culture Through the analysis and application of the Christological conciliar definitions of the Church from the council of Nicea to Chalcedon this African confession of Christ as the ancestor is weighed on the balance of the classical Christological orthodoxy Contents Ancestor
