The sun's rays are in part reflected by clouds and snow surfaces and, therefore, heat up and, in turn, are (invisible to human eye), instead of may become "trapped" by our atmosphere, such as carbon dioxide

What are the consequences?

The increase in Earth's temperatures causes the ice caps and glaciers to melt, which causes a rise in the sea level, changes more extreme weather (hurricanes and storms), the quantity and seasonality of rains, the flowering and growth times of plants (with serious consequences on agriculture) and ocean acidification (damaging coral reefs).

Where can these effects be seen?

The effects are evident not only in the polar regions but also in other areas of the planet. For example, some areas are becoming more and more arid, with possible serious consequences for ecosystems and the people who live there.

it's cold at the Poles

The Polar regions are found at the top and bottom of the Earth and they are the coldest, whitest places on Earth. Here, the land and sea stay frozen the most of the year and even the air is often so cold that the eye can see. Only a few animals are tough enough to survive these frozen conditions.

THE FACT
The polar regions are the coldest on Earth. The temperature can drop to below -50°C (-58°F) in Antarctica and to below -40°C (-40°F) in the Arctic.

The North and South Poles are at the top and bottom of the Earth. Every 24 hours the Earth turns once around its axis. The sun is an invisible line that runs through the middle (core) of the Earth, from pole to pole.

The Poles are covered in permanent ice and snow, and the climate conditions in these areas are very harsh. Many polar animals are changing rapidly because of climate change, and the animals that might have struggle to adapt.

How do animals and plants survive the polar climate?
All animals and plants that live in the polar regions have had to adapt to low temperatures. Animals generally have thick fur and layers of fat to survive the cold. Among these, the polar bear is the most famous, but there are also the reindeer, muskox, arctic fox, seal, walrus and penguin.

One of the most powerful Arctic hunters is the killer whale, or orca. It is not a true whale, but the largest kind of dolphin. Orcas live in groups and have a true language. They communicate with each other using sounds. They sleep with one eye open.

Zoological Garden,1900 The end of animal life: a start for ethical debate Franck L.B. Meijboom,Elsbeth N.

Stassen,2023-08-07 Killing animals is common practice yet it is not morally neutral The end of animal life is related to many societal and ethical questions and concerns Questions such as how long should we continue to treat an animal before putting it down But also the question whether it could be legitimate to kill individual animals for the welfare of the herd or of future generations The ongoing public and academic discussions on these and on other well known questions like those related to the killing of animals for food or for scientific purposes show that there is no one standard evaluation of animal life This book is an edited volume that enables the reader to get a grip on that plurality of views with regard to animals It helps to deal with the many questions related to the end of animal life The chapters show how the plurality of views on killing animals is related to moral presuppositions by providing a clear overview of the ethical views on end of life decisions Furthermore the book contains a number of applied studies of the ethical questions related to killing animals in various practices including small animal practice wildlife management fishing and fish farming animal experimentation and livestock farming These chapters can help veterinarians scientists students policy makers and many other professionals working with animals to easily get a good overview of the issues at stake and may contribute to responsible decision making with regard to the end of animal life
