Marx's Concept of Socialism and the Socialist Movement During a two- or three-year period in the early 1840s, Marx came to believe that a working-class revolution that would overthrow the capitalist mode of production, end the regime of class dominance, and abolish the system of private property was the only path to human emancipation. Marx had transformed himself into a Marxist socialist. His perspective on the socialist movement and the political struggles of the working class was what most distinguished him from other socialists. I will discuss Marx's description of communism as a "highly practical movement, pursuing practical aims, by practical means" in the following pages, which are broken up into several short sections.

Marx denounces capitalism for its inhumanity, but he embraces socialism for its possibility. Capitalism is a prerequisite for socialism. He thinks there are two reasons why a society that is better in every way is possible. First, the capitalist economic system is not predestined, eternal, or natural, as he repeatedly asserts. It is just another temporary way station in human history, a "transient stage of development" that is just as likely to be replaced as any previous production method. He is not merely lamenting the terrible state of the world when he criticizes capitalism; He is also looking forward to the possibility of a better future. Contrary to those who hold that "there is no alternative," which is a viewpoint that is so prevalent in today's society that it has its own acronym, TINA, Marx believes that capitalism does not signify the end of human history.
