Abstract The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on the body composition and metabolic profile of 10 obese women. The diet was composed of 25% protein, 40% carbohydrate, and 35% fat. The subjects lost an average of 10.5 kg (23.1%) of body weight, 7.5 kg (16.5%) of fat mass, and 3.0 kg (6.6%) of lean mass. The diet was well tolerated, and the subjects maintained a high level of physical activity throughout the study. The authors conclude that a 1000 kcal energy deficit diet is an effective means of achieving weight loss in obese women.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week walking program, while the control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The walking program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The program was supervised by a physical therapist. The primary outcome was the change in the 6-minute walk test (6MWT) score. Secondary outcomes included changes in heart rate, blood pressure, and self-reported physical and psychological health. The 6MWT score increased significantly in the walking group compared to the control group. There were no significant changes in heart rate, blood pressure, or self-reported physical and psychological health. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
