This inquiry undertakes a search for an appropriate political ecological strategy for preserving a measure of democratic governance during hard times. Without ignoring the global dimensions of the crisis the analysis finds an alternative path in the theory and practices of participatory environmental governance embodied in a growing relocalization movement and global eco-localism generally. Although such movements largely operate under the radar of the social sciences the media and the political realm generally these vibrant socio-ecological movements not only speak to the crisis ahead but are already well established and thriving on the ground including ecovillages, eco-communes, eco-neighborhoods and local transition initiatives. With the help of these ideas and projects the task is to influence the discourse of environmental political theory in ways that can be of assistance to those who will face climate crisis in its full magnitude. Nepal and Bangladesh Nanda R.

Shrestha, 2002-09-13 This authoritative thorough volume covers a broad range of topics from history to culture to current struggles in these fascinating countries. Often overshadowed on the world stage by issues surrounding India and Pakistan, Nepal and Bangladesh are nonetheless vital players in this theater of Asia. Nepal and Bangladesh brings a refreshing level of clarity to a wide variety of topics surrounding both nations including history, current affairs, business and economics, culture, literature, political science and travel. Written in a voice that speaks to general audiences from secondary instructors to interested business people and travelers to the region, this handbook paints a portrait of both countries that is at once complete and accessible. Beginning with far-reaching narrative histories of both nations, the text also contains a compendium of important people and events and concludes with an exhaustive reference section. Community Radio in South Asia

Kanchan K. Malik, Vinod Pavarala, 2020-06-09 This book explores the state of community radio, a significant independent media movement that began about two decades ago in different parts of South Asia. The volume outlines the socioeconomic and historical contexts for understanding the evolution and functioning of community radio in an increasingly globalised media environment. It provides a ring-side view of how various countries in South Asia have formulated policies that enabled the emergence of this third sector of broadcasting, public and private, being the other two through radio, rendering the media ecology in the region more pluralistic and diverse. The chapters in the volume, interspersed by practitioner perspectives, discuss a range of key issues related to community radio: radio policies, NGOisation of community radio spectrum management and democratisation of technology, disasters, emergencies, gender issues, sustainability and conflicts. One of the first of its kind, this volume will appeal to scholars and researchers of community media and independent media studies, cultural studies as well as sociology and social anthropology and South Asian studies.
