Archaeology in the Making William L. Rathje, Michael Shanks, Christopher Witmore, 2013 Archaeology in the Making is a collection of bold statements about archaeology its history how it works and why it is more important than ever This book comprises conversations about archaeology among some of its notable contemporary figures They delve deeply into the questions that have come to fascinate archaeologists over the last forty years or so those that concern major events in human history such as the origins of agriculture and the state and questions about the way archaeologists go about their work Many of the conversations highlight quite intensely held personal insight into what motivates us to pursue archaeology some may even be termed outrageous in the light they shed on the way archaeological institutions operate excavation teams professional associations university departments Archaeology in the Making is a unique document detailing the history of archaeology in second half of the 20th century to the present day through the words of some of its key proponents It will be invaluable for anybody who wants to understand the theory and practice of this ever developing discipline A History of Archaeological Thought Bruce G. Trigger, 2006-09-11 In its original edition Bruce Trigger s book was the first ever to examine the history of archaeological thought from medieval times to the present in world wide perspective Now in this new edition he both updates the original work and introduces new archaeological perspectives and concerns At once stimulating and even handed it places the development of archaeological thought and theory throughout within a broad social and intellectual framework The successive but interacting trends apparent in archaeological thought are defined and the author seeks to determine the extent to which these trends were a reflection of the personal and collective interests of archaeologists as these relate in the West at least to the fluctuating fortunes of the middle classes While subjective influences have been powerful Professor Trigger argues that the gradual accumulation of archaeological data has exercised a growing constraint on interpretation In turn this has increased the objectivity of archaeological research and enhanced its value for understanding the entire span of human history and the human condition in general The History and Archaeology of Jaffa archaeologists often become so involved in their potsherd patterns they seldom have time or energy left to address the broader processes responsible for the material culture patterns they recognize. Some of us have urged our colleagues to use the historical record as a springboard from which to launch hypotheses with which to better understand the behavioral and cultural processes responsible for the archaeological record. Too often this urging has resulted in reports designed like a sandwich having a slice of historical background followed by a totally different archaeological record and closed with a weevil-ridden slice of interpretation of questionable nutritive value for understanding the past. The reader is often left to wonder what the archaeological meat had to do with either slice of bread since the connection between the documented history and the material culture is left to the reader's imagination and the connection between the interpretation and the other disparate parts is tenuous at best. The plethora of stale archaeological sandwiches in the literature has resulted at the methodological level from a too narrow focus on the specific history and archaeology of a site and the individuals involved on it rather than a focus on the explanation of broader processes of culture to which the actors and events at the site-specific level responded.

A History of Archaeological Tourism Margarita Díaz-Andreu, 2020-02-25 This book examines the relationship between archaeological tourism and professional archaeology. It will do so by looking at this connection most visibly through nationalism and global capitalism from its origins in the early modern period until World War II. How separate is the development of archaeological tourism from that of the formation of archaeology as a discipline? And do the fields operate in two different worlds? Scholarly discussions have largely treated them as distinct fields with no connection. Histories of archaeology in particular have focused their attention on aspects such as the history of archaeological discoveries, archaeological thought, and more recently the political relationship between archaeology and nationalism and other ideologies. Largely missing from all these accounts has been an examination of how archaeology has been inserted into society, for example through something that all humans enjoy: leisure in the form of archaeological tourism. Moreover, just as histories of archaeology have largely ignored the connection between archaeology and tourism, so too has tourism in the reverse direction. Recent studies on tourism have centered on topics such as economy, sustainable and recession tourism, and new types of tourism including ecotourism and medical tourism.

An Historical and Standing Structure Study of the Flood Control Project at Portage, Columbia County, Wisconsin Joyce McKay, 1981 Completed during October 1981 the historical and standing structure study of the flood control project in Portage Wisconsin surveyed structures and sites in the First Ward and below the 800 foot contour level between Cook and the Portage Canal on the northwest the Chicago Milwaukee St Paul and Pacific Railroad on the north and MacFarland Road on the west The level of investigation was a phase I or reconnaissance survey intended to identify those structures and sites which might be potentially eligible for the National Register of Historic Places At this stage of the investigation a fairly detailed literature search provided a local and regional context with which to judge site significance Because the overall flood control project would affect sites favorably i.e. protect them from flood damage it was concluded that any of the three project alternatives the rebuilding of a levee the construction of ring levees or waterproofing individual structures whichever gave more protection should be selected Each alternative could require some site mitigation And in fact mitigation projects recommended in the report might in the end enhance the site involved
