Guillaume Favre

Surgical Gems In Dermatology:

Surgical Gems in Dermatology Perry Robins, 1991 Dermatologic surgery is a major part of a dermatologist's practice. In fact, one out of three patient visits to a dermatologist is for a surgical procedure. Up to now, dermatologists have had to rely on widely scattered literature on these procedures to be found only in clinical journals or more narrowly based clinical references. This work allows dermatologists and residents to gain expert advice by noted dermatologists with extensive surgical experience in covering the whole range of the dermatological surgical spectrum. These experts report on the proven techniques they have developed and used in their practice. The Gems are concise practical how-to hints in a succinct text accompanied by illustrations and photographs that demonstrate the technique devised to help improve the quality of surgical care in the dermatologist's practice.
