Education, Social Background and Cognitive Ability Gary N. Marks, 2013-10-23 Are socioeconomic inequalities in education declining Is socioeconomic background becoming less important for people's occupational class or status How important is cognitive ability for education and later occupational outcomes How do countries differ in the importance of socioeconomic background for education and work Gary N Marks argues that in western industrialized countries pervasive views that socioeconomic background or class background has strong and unchanging relationships with education and later socioeconomic outcomes resistant to policy and social change are unfounded Marks provides a large amount of evidence from many countries showing that the influence of socioeconomic background for education is moderate and most often declining and socioeconomic background has only very weak impacts on adults occupation and earnings after taking into account education and cognitive ability Furthermore Marks shows that cognitive ability is a more powerful influence than socioeconomic background for educational outcomes and that in addition to its indirect effects through education has a direct effect on occupation and earnings Its effects cannot be dismissed as simply another aspect of socioeconomic background nor do the usual criticisms of cognitive ability apply The declining effects for socioeconomic background and the importance of cognitive ability support several of the contentions of modernization theory The book contributes to a variety of debates within sociology quantitative and qualitative approaches explanatory and non explanatory theory the relationship between theory and empirical research the role of political ideology in research sociology as a social science and sociology s contribution to knowledge about contemporary societies It will appeal to professionals in the fields of education and sociology as well as postgraduate students and academics involved in the debate

Changing Urban Education Clarence Nathan Stone,1998 With critical issues like desegregation and funding facing our schools dissatisfaction with public education has reached a new high Teachers decry inadequate resources while critics claim educators are more concerned with job security than effective teaching Though urban education has reached crisis proportions contending players have difficulty agreeing on a common program of action This book tells why Changing Urban Education confronts the prevailing naivete in school reform by examining the factors that shape reinforce or undermine reform efforts Edited by one of the nation s leading urban scholars it examines forces for change and resistance in urban education and proposes that the barrier to reform can only be overcome by understanding how schools fit into the broader political contexts of their cities Much of the problem with our schools lies with the reluctance of educators to recognize the profoundly political character of public education The contributors show how urban political contexts vary widely with factors like racial composition the role of the teachers union and relations between cities and surrounding metropolitan areas Presenting case studies of original field research in Baltimore Chicago Houston and six other urban areas they consider how resistance to desegregation and the concentration of the poor in central urban areas affect education and they suggest how cities can build support for reform through the involvement of business and other community players By demonstrating the complex interrelationship between urban education and politics this book shows schools to be not just places for educating children but also major employers and large spenders of tax dollars It also introduces the concept of civic capacity the ability of educators and non educators to work together on common goals and suggests that this key issue must be addressed before education can be improved Changing Urban Education makes it clear to educators that the outcome of reform efforts depends heavily on their political context as it reminds political scientists that education is a major part of the urban mix While its prognosis is not entirely optimistic it sets forth important guidelines that cannot be ignored if our schools are to successfully prepare children for the future

Race, Socioeconomic Status, and Competency Testing William P. O'Hare, 1979

Socioeconomic Inequality and Educational Outcomes Markus Broer, Yifan Bai, Frank Fonseca, 2019-05-15 This open access book focuses on trends in educational inequality using twenty years of grade 8 student data collected from 13 education systems by the IEA's Trends in Mathematics and Science Study TIMSS between 1995 and 2015 While the overall positive association between family socioeconomic status SES and student achievement is well documented in the literature the magnitude of this relationship is contingent on social contexts and is expected to vary by education system Research on how such associations differ across societies and how the strength of these relationships has changed over time is limited This study therefore addresses an important research and policy question by examining changes in the inequality of educational outcomes due to SES over this 20 year period and also examines the extent to which the performance of students from disadvantaged backgrounds has improved over time in each education system Education systems generally aim to narrow the achievement gap between low and high SES students and to improve the performance of disadvantaged students However the lack of quantifiable and comprehensible measures makes it difficult to assess and monitor the effect of such efforts In this study a novel measure of SES that is consistent across all TIMSS cycles allows students to be categorized into different socioeconomic groups This measure of SES may also contribute to future research using TIMSS trend data Readers will gain new insight into how educational inequality has changed in the education systems studied and how such change may relate to the more complex picture of macroeconomic changes in those societies
