The First Year Teacher's Survival Guide: Ready to Use Strategies, Tools, and Activities for Meeting the Challenges of Each School Day. By Julia G. Thompson. The New Education, 1891. Teacher Survival Kim Phillips Dennis, 1997. This study presents information gathered during personal interviews with dynamic and capable teachers in the areas of preparedness for teaching, teaching concerns, survival skills and strategies, and how these teachers support themselves and others in the teaching profession. The data are related to Purkey and Novak's work on invitational education and connections are made to Combs' perceptual orientation. Potential participants were gathered through personal recommendations from their colleagues. All teachers recommended were approached and asked for voluntary participation. Of those who agreed to participate, 6 were selected based on gender and years of experience. There was a male and female participant at each of the following career levels: early, mid, and late. The 4 major survival skills that became apparent were the ability to believe in oneself and others, to act decisively upon that belief through personal and professional goal setting, as well as accessing resources to actively seek opportunities for interaction with other professionals and to celebrate personal and professional successes.
