Identity Theft

Identity theft is a growing and serious crime. It happens when someone uses your personal information without your knowledge or consent to commit a crime, such as fraud or theft. Always be aware of new ways in which you are at risk for identity theft.

Guard Your Personal Information

- Ask why: If you don't know why someone is asking for your personal information, ask why they want it. The Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act is one law that limits the types of information that governments, businesses, and other organizations can collect from you. For more information on this and similar laws, visit the Office of the Privacy Commissioner at www.oic.gc.ca. Your provincial or territorial consumer affairs office may also be able to tell you about similar laws that apply where you live.
- Guard your PIN: Always shield the keypad when entering your personal identification number (PIN). Never give your PIN or password to anyone, including friends, family, staff at your financial institution or the police. If you think someone knows your PIN, change it immediately and tell your financial institution.
- Carry only what you need: Consider leaving important identity cards, such as your Social Insurance Number, at home and carry only the payment cards you need.
- Don't reuse it easily for thieves: Choose a PIN or password that does not include your name, telephone number, date of birth, address or Social Insurance Number.
- Protect your personal information: Keep your birth certificate, Social Insurance Number and passport in a secure place.
- Be careful with personal information you no longer need: Shred or destroy sensitive information before throwing it out. This includes expired and unused credit and debit cards.

Guard Your Computer and Its Contents

- Choose a password that has a combination of letters (upper and lower case), numbers and symbols.
- Make sure you have the most current anti-virus protection software and a firewall, you may have these through your computer's operating system.
- Don't send financial or other confidential information using email or text messaging.
- If you are buying something or banking online, make sure that the web page is secure. Here is how you can tell that a website is secure:
  - The web address begins with https:// — the 's' indicates that the site is secure.
  - You can see a small icon, often a lock or key, in your browser window. The lock should be in a locked position and the key should be unbroken.
- Never follow a link in an email to start an online transaction with financial services like banks, credit unions or online credit payment sites. Go directly to the organization's website instead.
- When you are disposing of a computer, delete your personal information from the hard drive using overwrite software or destroy the drive.

See the Spam, Phishing and Spyware sections of this Handbook for additional tips and information on ways to protect yourself and your computer.

Be Careful with Social Networking

Be careful what you post on your social network profiles. Your status updates — about your whereabouts (are you at work? heading out to watch a game?) and upcoming travel plans — may expose your home to criminals who will take advantage of your absences. If you provide personal information, like your phone number or birthday, they can take this private information and use it to steal your identity. By looking at your photos or videos, they can also figure out where you live and work. Here's how to protect yourself:

- Think about who is receiving your status updates. Make sure you are comfortable with everyone who has access to your personal page, and if you aren't — remove them.
- Make it a habit to clean up your profile from time to time. Always think twice about what you are posting, we tend to think about our personal information as private, but in reality, many can be seen by just about anyone.
- Choose the highest and most restrictive security setting available. Privacy and security settings on social networks help you control who can and can't see your profile.
- Keep personal information, personal — do not provide information like your birthday, full name, phone number, Social Insurance Number or address.
- Be mindful of what you post. Is there information someone could use to steal your identity, burglarize your home or put you in danger? For example, if you provide information about your daily routines, criminals will have an easier time figuring out the best time your home will be empty.

Visit the Office of the Privacy Commissioner for more information on social networking and privacy.

Tracking your Activities — It's easier than you think.

We are always connected, either through cellular networks, Wi-Fi access points, satellite links or global positioning systems. This can be a good thing. For example, in medical or other emergencies, GPS systems can help locate people who have an medical or other emergencies dialled 911.
