

The Boston Tea Party

On December 16, 1773, a group of Bostonians, known as the Sons of Liberty, boarded the tea ship, the Tea, and dumped 342 chests of tea into the harbor. This act of defiance against British taxation led to the Boston Tea Party, a pivotal event in the American Revolution.

The British government had imposed a tax on tea, which the colonists found unfair. They believed that they should have a say in the laws that governed them, and they refused to pay the tax. The Boston Tea Party was a direct action to protest the tax.

The British government responded by closing the port of Boston and cutting off trade with the city. This led to the Boston Tea Party, a pivotal event in the American Revolution.
