Technologies Of Knowing A Proposal For The Human Sciences:

Technologies of Knowing John Willinsky, 1999 The author argues that the human sciences have failed in their promise to offer a knowledge of the world that possesses real public value Where some critics have condemned computers electronic communication for putting us in this age of overflow others have praised computers for their own sake the author takes a middle ground Technologies of Knowing offers a starting point from which to rethink our understanding of information exasperation adds a new level of insight into how to make the uses of information more democratic Methodology for the Human Sciences Donald E. Polkinghorne, 1984-06-30 Methodology for the Human Sciences addresses the growing need for a comprehensive textbook that surveys the emerging body of literature on human science research and clearly describes procedures and methods for carrying out new research strategies It provides an overview of developing methods describes their commonalities and variations and contains practical information on how to implement strategies in the field In it Donald Polkinghorne calls for a renewal of debate over which methods are appropriate for the study of human beings proposing that the results of the extensive changes in the philosophy of science since 1960 call for a reexamination of the original issues of this debate The book traces the history of the deliberations from Mill and Dilthey to Hempel and logical positivism examines recently developed systems of inquiry and their importance for the human sciences and relates these systems to the practical problems of doing research on topics related to human experience It discusses historical realism systems and structures phenomenology and hermeneutics action theory and the implications recent systems have for a revised human science methodology Knowledge Mobilisation and Social Sciences Jon Bannister, Irene Hardill, 2016-03-17 The essays presented in this volume examine knowledge mobilisation and its relation to research impact and engagement The social sciences matter because they can help us to understand and address the complex challenges confronting society This is particularly true in an era of significant downward pressure on public expenditure a consequence of the global fiscal crisis when there is a striking need to ensure that policies are demonstrably effective and efficient The impact agenda in the UK reflected in parallel global debates actively encourages the social sciences to make and demonstrate a difference to justify and protect social science funding This volume shows how knowledge mobilisation can be thought of systematically as a process encompassing engagement leading to the co production and channelling of knowledge to make a difference in the economy and society This book was originally published as a special issue of Contemporary Social Science National Science
