

The Body

So many amazing things are happening in your body right now! Let's take a look at just a few of them...

As you breathe, spongy bags called lungs are sucking air in and putting it into your blood.

As you run, stretchy cords called muscles pull bones back and forward. Your bones connect together in a structure called a skeleton. And your skin wraps everything up.

Tiny electrical signals are making your heart beat - bur-bum bur-bum - to pump blood around your body.

Your body is made from lots of different parts that work in teams to do important jobs. These parts are called organs.

When you think or laugh or wiggle your toes, you use up energy. The energy comes from the food you eat. Your blood carries food energy to every part of your body.

If you look at the pictures in this book, you're using organs called eyes. And when you think about all of this, you use an organ called the brain.
