EDGAR RICE RUREROUGH is well qualified to write Western stories. He "rode range" in the early days and knows the life.

THIS is the first chapter may be his written and be made good-on stage. No better part of the old rock show can be found in your own library. These dramatic situations, with gaudy characters presented with incongruous skill, the humor and quaintness of the "larks," and every all the glamour and romance of the old show.

she is soon joined by Maria. Maria asks her if she has any news of their father.
Fanny replies that she has not, and that she has not even seen him since the beginning of their return to England.
She has, however, been writing to him
and has had no answer.

A HALF dozen men sprawled comfortably in back tilted chairs against the side of the Bar Y bunk house at the home ranch They were young men lithe of limb tanned of face and clear of eye Their skins shone from recent ablutions and their slicked hair was still damp for they had but just come from the evening meal and meals at the home ranch required a toilet One of them was singing In the shade of a tree we two sat him an me Where the Haegler Hills slope to the Raft While our ponies browsed round reins a draggin the ground Then he looks at me funny an laft Most anyone would interrupted a listener Shut up admonished another I ain t only heered this three hundred an sixty five times in the las year Do you think I want to miss anything Unabashed the sweet singer continued Do you see that there town he inquires pintin down To some shacks sprawlin round in the heat I opined that I did an he shifted his quid After drowndin a tumble bug neat Then he looks at me square There s a guy waitin there Thet the sheep men have hired to git me Are you game to come down to that jerk water town Jest to see what in Hell you will see One of the group rose and stretched yawning He was a tall dark man Perhaps in his expression there was something a bit sinister He seldom smiled and when not in liquor rarely spoke He was foreman had been foreman for over a year and except for a couple of sprees during which he had playfully and harmlessly shot up the adjoining town he had been a good foreman for he was a thorough horseman knew the range understood cattle was a hard worker and knew how to get work out of others It had been six months since he had been drunk though he had taken a drink now and then if one of the boys chanced to bring a flask back from town His abstinence might have been accounted for by the fact that Elias Henders his boss had threatened to break him the next time he fell from grace You see Bull the old man had said we re the biggest outfit in this part of the country an it don t look good to see the foreman of the Bar Y shootin up the town like some kid tenderfoot that s been slapped in the face with a bar rag You gotta quit it Bull I ain t a goin to tell you again And Bull knew the old man wouldn t tell him again so he had stayed good for six long months

Perhaps it was not entirely a desire to cling to the foreman's job that kept him in the straight and narrow path. Perhaps Diana Henders' opinion had had more weight with him than that of her father. I'm ashamed of you, Bull, she had said, and she refused to ride with him for more than a week. That had been bad enough, but as if to make it worse, she had ridden several times with a new hand who had drifted in from the north a short time before and been taken on by Bull to fill a vacancy. Competing for his daughter, Diana, ranch hand Colby sabotages recovering alcoholic foreman, Bull, and takes his job. The local stage is repeatedly robbed of gold bullion from the owner's mine and Bull is suspected. The cowardly sheriff does not take action on the robberies. Rich Easterner Wainwright tries to buy the mine and ranch for a low price but Henders refuses the offer and discusses the property's true value with Diana. She is intrigued by Wainwright's Eastern educated son, Jefferson, who proposes marriage. However, when they are attacked by Indians during the roundup, he runs rather than defend her. Henders is mortally wounded in the battle. Henders will bequeath his property to his brother, John, back East so that he can take care of Diana, but John dies too. The Wainwrights pretend that Henders had agreed to a sale but Diana knows better. Diana's Eastern cousin, Lillian, brings Corson, a lawyer, to try to seize the ranch and gold mine. They insist that the ranch and mine are nearly played out and that they should sell the property, offering her a small amount They show their ignorance about western ways Bull encourages Diana that the property is worth more than they say and advises her that the Wainwrights are often at the mine The Eastern lawyer finally announces that Diana has no property rights due to the wills
