"Mother Katharine Drexel was born into wealth in Philadelphia in the United States. As a young woman, she was deeply distressed by the poverty and hopeless conditions endured by many Native Americans and Afro-Americans. With great courage and confidence in God's grace, she chose to give not just her fortune but her whole life totally to the Lord."

Union's cause during the Civil War. Her uncle and mentor Anthony established Drexel University to provide instruction to the working class regardless of race, religion, or gender. Her stepmother was Emma Bovier whose brother John became the great grandfather of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. Katharine Drexel's family were American royalty. As a Philadelphia socialite, Kitty, as she was often called, adored formal balls and teas, rowing regattas, and sailing races. She was beautiful, intelligent, and high spirited. But when her stepmother died in 1883 and her father two years later, a sense of desolation nearly overwhelmed her. She was twenty-seven and in possession of a staggering inheritance. Approached for aid by the Catholic Indian Missions, she surprised her family by giving generously of money and time. It was during this period of acute self-examination that she journeyed to Rome for a private audience with Pope Leo XIII. With characteristic energy and fervor, she detailed the plight of the Native Americans and begged for additional missionaries to serve them. His reply astonished her: "Why not my child yourself become a missionary?" In "Saint Katharine: The Life of Katharine Drexel," Cordelia Frances Biddle recounts the extraordinary story of a Gilded Age luminary who became a selfless worker for the welfare and rights of America's poorest persons. After years of supporting efforts on behalf of African Americans and American Indians, Katharine finally decided to follow her inner voice and profess vows. The act made headlines. Like her father and grandfather, she was a shrewd businessperson; she retained her financial autonomy and established her own order, the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament. Until her death in 1955, she devoted herself and her inheritance to building much-needed schools in the South and Southwest, despite threats from the Ku Klux Klan and others. Pragmatic, sometimes willful, ardent, and a charismatic leader, Katharine Drexel was an indefatigable champion of justice and parity. When illness incapacitated her in later years, divine radiance was said to emanate from her, a radiance that led to her canonization on October 1, 2000. Butler's Lives of the Saints: January ...
