Communities of Practice in the History of English Joanna Kopaczyk, Andreas H. Jucker, 2013-10-10 Languages change and they keep changing as a result of communicative interactions and practices in the context of communities of language users The articles in this volume showcase a range of such communities and their practices as loci of language change in the history of English The notion of communities of practice takes its starting point in the work of Jean Lave and Etienne Wenger and refers to groups of people defined both through their membership in a community and through their shared practices Three types of communities are particularly highlighted networks of letter writers groups of scribes and printers and other groups of professionals in particular administrators and scientists In these diverse contexts in England Scotland the United States and South Africa language change is not seen as an abstract process but as a response to the communicative needs and practices of groups of people engaged in interaction

Message and Medium Caroline Tagg, Mel Evans, 2020-06-08 Studies of digital communication technologies often focus on the apparently unique set of multimodal resources afforded to users and the development of innovative linguistic strategies for performing mediated identities and maintaining online social networks This edited volume interrogates the novelty of such practices by establishing a transhistorical approach to the study of digital communication The transhistorical approach explores language practices as lived experiences grounded in historical contexts and aims to identify those elements of human behaviour that transcend historical boundaries looking beyond specific developments in communication technologies to understand the enduring motivations and social concerns that drive human communication The volume reveals long term patterns in the indexical functions of seemingly innovative written and multimodal resources and the ideologies that underpin them and shows that methods are not necessarily contingent on their datasets historical analytic frameworks can be applied to digital data and newer approaches used to understand historical data These insights present exciting opportunities for English language researchers both historical and modern

A History of Calligraphy Albertine Gaur, 1994 Calligraphy can be said to have developed among three of the world's major civilizations the Arabs and those who use the Arabic script whose tradition centres on the preservation of the divine revelation through the Koran the Chinese and those who use Chinese script and the Europeans who adopted the Roman script and laws within a Christian tradition In this wide ranging and heavily illustrated study Albertine Gaur explores the history of calligraphy and the place of calligraphers from the earliest times to the present day within all three of these very different cultures In addition she discusses the tools for writing and the development of calligraphy in relation to printing and typography and examines current trends and the work of contemporary calligraphers
